

I agree with Wisconsin Governor Jim Doyle: "The No Call List provides strong protection to more than 80 percent of state residents and we need citizens to tell the federal government to leave the No Call List as it is. Telemarketing is the #1 consumer complaint in Wisconsin."

Our law, allowing only one call to former customers, is exactly as we wish it to be. Please do not follow the advice of the Consumer Banking Association, but rather citizens of Wisconsin. I do not wish to have the Federal Communication Commission tamper with or invalidate any parts of Wisconsin state law or the No Call List. Being a part of the this list has restored sanity and quiet to my evenings. Tampering with this law sends the wrong messages to consumers in our state--that the FCC believes Wisconsin consumers can't make sound decisions for ourselves and that the FCC does not serve citizens, but corporate interests.
